

II. Interdisciplinary Doctoral Conference 2013

The Doctoral Student Association of the University of Pécs (PTE DOK) is organizing an academic conference involving more scientific fields. The name of the conference is Interdisciplinary Doctoral Conference (IDK 2013) which will happen on the 15th - 17th of May, 2013.

Based on the success of the last year IDK 2012 conference, this year we are going to welcome the participants with extended programs. While last year professors from the University of Pécs hold their lectures and introduced their scientific fields; this year the PhD students can also report about their current stage of research activity in English and Hungarian.

The objective of the conference is to prepare floor for open discussions between national and international PhD students, to foster personal and professional relationships, to boost cooperation, and to create platform for scientific interactions.

We are pleased to invite national and international PhD students from all scientific fields to the “IDK 2013” where you will have the possibility to present your research or poster at specific technical sessions; even artists have a place to display their work. At the same time workshops and round-table discussions will enrich the program.

This year beside the expected presentations, every technical session will be followed by an interdisciplinary discussion with current problems and topics worth to negotiate on. The aim of the interdisciplinary sections is to generate discussion and debate after the competent presenters hold their speech. Hence colleagues from another scientific field can learn new knowledge and new perspective which might be used for later research.

Topics of the interdisciplinary discussions: “Ethnical, religious diversity and multiculturalism”; “Euthanasia”; “Advantage and disadvantage of genetic modification”; “Direction of higher education”.
