Description

The Doctoral School of Theology in the Faculty of Orthodox Theology from Cluj-Napoca began in the 1998-1999 academic year, the first doctoral advisor being Prof. priest Ioan Ică. Over the years the activity of the Doctoral School has diversified, reaching, in the 2012-2013 academic year, seven specializations.

Beginning with the 2007-2008 academic year, the Doctoral School of Theology was named after the great dogmatist Isidor Todoran. In the same year, doctoral students were provided a room for documentation where, through the efforts of teachers and several PhD students, was established a library of useful speciality books and magazines for the doctoral studies.

The doctoral students conduct research projects on topical issues relevant to the contemporary interconfessional and interreligious dialogue. Since 2008, in the Faculty are organized every year scientific sessions with the participation of doctoral students from other faculties from the country and from abroad. The findings of these scientific meetings materialized in the publication of two volumes of studies, and other two forthcoming.
