Description

The Graduate School - Personalized evidence-based psychological assessment and psychological interventions – is headed by professor Daniel David, Ph.D., and represents the graduate program (doctoral/postdoctoral) of both the Department of Clinical Psychology and Psychotherapy and the Department of Applied Educational Psychology of the Babeş-Bolyai University. The Graduate School is based on the “clinical science” and “scientist practitioner” paradigms, and promotes personalized evidence-based psychological interventions, thus providing a useful set of skills for both professional insertion on the work market and outstanding academic and research activity. The themes generally subscribe to the field of psychological assessment, clinical psychology, psychopathology, psychotherapy and psychological counseling, cognitive sciences, cognitive-behavioral coaching and positive psychology, genetic counseling, and evolutionary psychology. The research infrastructure is integrated within the International Institute for the Advanced Studies of Psychotherapy and Applied Mental Health (International Institute for Psychotherapy, an excellence research unit of European relevance, included in the MERIL platform), an academic spin-off of the Department of Clinical Psychology and Psychotherapy. Alumni can continue studying in post-doctoral programs both in Romania and abroad, and/or can enter the labor market both in Romania and abroad, the Doctoral School being a world-class institution, joining prestigious international-level academic networks.
